WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A low pressure trough will be moving across the region today. There will be lingering cloudiness in a lot of areas and some showers are also expected to develop, mainly over the mountains. Snow levels will be around 4000 feet in the north and about 6000 feet in the south. There will be a break between systems Thursday into Friday with partly cloudy skies prevailing, especially for the mountains. A stronger, wet weather system will arrive at the coast Friday afternoon and move inland overnight. Rain or snow will hit all areas of the region over the weekend, although the Far Eastside Predictive Services Area (PSA) may not see much in the way of precipitation totals, but overall cool, moist conditions will still prevail there. After a break in between systems Monday, more wet weather is expected next Tuesday and Wednesday. Snow levels will vary, but the lowest levels will be similar to today's. Daily max temperatures will mostly be just below seasonal averages for the next 7 days. Some gusty southerly winds will develop Friday afternoon ahead of the incoming weather system. Gusts may become as strong as 40-50 mph in the windiest locations, mainly along the coast and in the northern mountains and for the Shasta Valley.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A Pacific trough will bring southwest to northwest winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph to the mountain ridges and desert passes through this evening. On the back side of this trough, there will be northwest to northeast winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph across the South Coast of Santa Barbara and the Grapevine this evening through Thursday morning. There will also be north to northeast winds of 15 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph below the canyons and passes of Ventura and Los Angeles Counties Thursday morning. Elsewhere, there will be local gusty offshore winds across Southern California Thursday morning. Winds will decrease significantly Thursday afternoon and become light by Thursday night. The trough will also bring scattered showers mainly to the Sierra through this afternoon, with only very light amounts of precipitation expected. Temperatures will be near to 5 degrees below normal through Thursday with mid 40s to mid 50s across the mountains, mid 50s to mid 60s in the Central California Valleys, and mid 60s to mid 70s in the Southern California Valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly above 30% away from the deserts today and then drop into the single digits and teens away from the San Joaquin Valley Thursday. A weak ridge of high pressure will cause temperatures to warm to around 5 degrees above normal and minimum humidity to stay mainly in the single digits and teens Friday and Saturday. A Pacific trough will approach the coast and move inland Sunday and Monday bringing cooling and higher humidity to the region. Showers will be possible Sunday night and Monday depending on how this trough evolves.
